Gay? Fine By Crookston: T-shirt campaign in support of gay acceptance

People like to talk about a divided America when it comes to gay issues, but this Spring, students and faculty at UMC are sending one message: Gay is fine by them. On April 18, T-shirts will be distributed that read “gay? fine by me.” The purpose of the Gay? Fine By Me™ T-Shirt Project is to give students and staff a simple but effective way to condemn homophobia publicly. Organizers say it is a way to give voice to students who support equal rights for all Americans and oppose homophobia, but whose beliefs are too often drowned out in the noise surrounding the issue. Thousands nationwide are expected to participate in the T-Shirt Project this spring.

The Gay? Fine By Me T-Shirt Project began at Duke University in Spring 2003. A few years earlier, the Princeton Review had named Duke the most gay-unfriendly school in America (“Alternative Lifestyles are Not an Alternative”). Over dinner one night, ten friends, both gay and straight, wondered if most people at Duke were really homophobic, or if that was just the perception. To find out, they printed T-shirts that read “gay? fine by me.” to see how many of their peers would wear them. After 10 days, the students had distributed almost 2,000 shirts, and the next year Duke didn’t appear anywhere on the Princeton Review’s list.

Since then, the T-Shirt Project has spread to over 200 other schools, churches and communities, and organizers have distributed over 60,000 shirts in almost all 50 states. Fine By Me Inc. is a non-profit, dedicated to giving voice to the friends and supporters of LGBT Americans.

For more information on the Gay? Fine By Me T-Shirt Project at Crookston, contact the Asht Jung with the GLBTA Programs Office by calling 281-8589, or email umcglbta@umcrookston.edu. UMC will be sponsoring three blood drives again during the 2007-2008 academic year. Thanks to all those who continue to support this important event.
