Thursday Commons: ‘The Role of Science, Technology, and Perception in the New Age of Resource Scarcity’

by Edward Anderson, Ph.D.

Edward Anderson, Ph.D., will present ‘The Role of Science, Technology, and Perception in the New Age of Resource Scarcity’ at Thursday Commons, Thursday, April 29, from 12:15 to 2 p.m. in Bede Ballroom.

Anderson is recognized the world over as a strong proponent of personal rapid transit (PRT) systems. For the past 40 years, he has dedicated himself to the field by designing, presenting, and writing about PRT. His numerous contributions to PRT technology include chairing both national and international conferences. This international lecturer and expert has testified before the Minnesota legislature and the U.S. Congress. The author of three books and more than 100 engineering papers, Anderson serves as the editor of “Personal Rapid Transit” and holds 10 patents.

From 1963-86, Anderson taught at the University of Minnesota in the Department of Mechanical Engineering, and from 1986-92, taught aerospace and mechanical engineering at Boston University. Over the years, Anderson has been recognized for his achievements and most recently was named a 2010 recipient of the Charles W. Britzius Distinguished Engineer Award. This recognition is the highest honor given by the Minnesota Federation of Engineering Science and Technology Societies. His educational background includes a doctorate in aeronautics and astronautics from Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a master of science in mechanical engineering from the University of Minnesota, and a bachelor of science in mechanical engineering from Iowa State University.

“Dr. Anderson developed and taught a course dealing with society, technology, and energy over 30 years ago which was very futuristic and was actually a holistic course in “sustainability,” according to Dan Svedarsky, director of the U of M, Crookston Center for Sustainability. “He is truly a renaissance thinker and sees the world not as it is but how it could be.”

This special presentation will be a follow-up to Earth Week activities. This year marks the fortieth anniversary of Earth Day and the Crookston campus has planned a week of events to create awareness, encourage involvement, and educate the campus and community about the opportunity we have to take action on behalf of the planet.
